The City of Tulsa

Centrally located between Kansas City, MO, Chicago, IL, and Dallas, TX, Tulsa is a major urban center and is a metropolitan statistical area that includes the cities of Bartlesville, Claremore, Jenks, Glenpool, and Owasso. The Oklahoma City metropolitan area is the second-largest in the state and is located 162 miles south of Tulsa. Tulsa is also located ten minutes from the Tulsa International Airport. The City of Tulsa earns the nickname "The Roughhould Seat of the South" based on the diversity of its citizens and an American track record of leading the nation in major metropolitan development initiatives.

If you’re considering studying in the United States, Tulsa, Oklahoma — located in the heart of the plains — is a terrific choice. Oklahoma’s second-largest city is home to a metropolitan population of more than 600,000, except for winter and hot summer months. Tulsa boasts something to do in Tulsa, the perfect combination of small city friendliness with big-city amenities.

I’ve known about TU for many years, who graduated from TU. She told me that the coursework is challenging, but ultimately rewarding. My professor and I enjoyed a great place. The University of Tulsa had transformed me into a new person – a better one.

but also someone who is ready to lead in whatever I choose to pursue after college. TU has extracurricular and leadership opportunities have not only made me a well-educated person, but also someone who is ready to lead in whatever I choose to pursue after college. TU has in – like the environment and current issues that affect our world. TU’s excellent academic programs have provided me with knowledge in the field I would like to pursue in the future. More importantly, the university’s dynamic culture and leadership opportunities have not only made me a well-educated person, but also someone who is ready to lead in whatever I choose to pursue after college. TU has transformed into a new person – a better one.

You can participate in more than 200 campus organizations including honor societies, professional associations, special interest groups and community service projects.

Because Tulsa is quite a multicultural city, students can find food from all around the world – Thai, Mexican, Italian, Indian and more. Students can find food from all around the world – Thai, Mexican, Italian, Indian and more.

I was very interested in petroleum engineering. I visited the university and fell in love with the campus. I thought it was a beautiful place. The University of Tulsa has everything I was looking for. I knew I wanted to go there.
