Find your path

Declare a major/minor. Evaluate your major and make sure it is the right fit for you. Start thinking about a future career that you will find rewarding.

Know your major/minor requirements and map out your course schedule for all four years. Some classes are only offered certain semesters and you’ll need to plan for those. And make sure your classes fit your plan to graduate.

Expand your horizons

Visit the Center for Global Education and start thinking about if you’d like to study abroad. Start looking for work experience. On campus jobs can be found through Financial Aid.

Get involved

Decide what activities you really want to commit to and think about future leadership roles you could take in those organizations.

Build relationships with your professors by going to office hours and getting involved in your department's initiatives and events. Think about getting a faculty mentor to help you prepare for your future career.

Build your skills

Visit Career Services for advice on building your resume and investigating career options. Look for internship or research opportunities in your field to enhance your skill set. Volunteer through True Blue Neighbors and attend a professional conference or Career Fair.

Sign up to be a tutor (at CSAS) in classes in which you've excelled. Helping others is a great way to keep your skills fresh.

Continue to improve

Start building a professional wardrobe. Hone your communication skills to set yourself apart from others.

Come to the Center for Student Academic Support or attend a workshop for help refining your study skills, test taking strategies, or note-taking.
